In the grand symphony of life, there are few certainties. Among them, one stands out starkly: our time here is finite. Yet, it's the inevitability of our final encore that many of us prefer not to dwell on. This is entirely human, but it's a fact that can't be brushed aside indefinitely. End-of-life planning, while often seen as daunting, can be transformed into an empowering process—a legacy of care and love for our loved ones.
